

Dear Nellie

This letter came last eve. Sorry to hear that Rhoda is not in good spirits. I feared the effects of what she had undertaken both on her eyes and her health. Cant you coax her out of it?

What did Cousin John Clark hear from his family. You know they were sick when he was up here and he was anxious about them.

When do you expect to come home. If you are going in to that new scheme had you not better remain now till after the opening of the University term, then you will save expense as you will have to be down when the term begins, then you can get started in your new studies and can afford to come home for a while. The state of mind in the family is something like this - Joe delighted, Charlie having guessed from your correspondence with L. Hardy, not at all surprised, but feeling a little as if the world turned a safer side to you than it did to him, Papa disapproving but so sure that Prof. Sill would veto it, and that you would do nothing he disapproved that I don't believe he has thought of it since.

Ought you not to call on Allie Hilton while you are down? I guess Charlie can tell you where they live.

Charlie is ready to go so must close.
Love to Cousin Lou.
